occurrence of a large number of cases of Legionnaires Disease due to contaminated air conditioning units. On 1 January 2010 the See the Hazard Information page for more detailed information. The air conditioning system draws in outside air, filters it, heats, cools or humidifies it, circulates it around the building, then expels a portion of it to the outside environment. Substandard air conditioning will lead to poor indoor air quality irritable and potentially very sick workers.

Studies show that increased sick leave and lower productivity related to poor air conditioning, costs many millions of dollars each year. The human costs of poor air conditioning include viral illness, respiratory problems, and deadly Legionnaires There are three major categories of health problems

Victoria. The second generation, the Omega B, was manufactured from 1993 to 2003. Reengineered versions were manufactured in Australia since 1988 as the Holden Commodore and its derivatives since 1999, which were in turn exported to South America as the Chevrolet Omega and the Middle East as the Chevrolet Lumina. In the United Kingdom, Vauxhall reentered the market segment in 2007 with the VXR8. Sales began in November. The body was designed as an evolution of the previous Opel design theme engineered more towards aerodynamics in view of higher fuel prices and the general drive towards more fuel efficiency. The result was a remarkable drag coefficient of 0.28 0.32 for the Caravan. The whole development program cost two billion Deutschmarks. The UK market version of the final generation of Rekord had been marketed as the Vauxhall Carlton, and this nameplate was retained for the new car. More importantly, the Omega came with a self diagnose system which is now a standard feature in present day cars, whose output could be read by appropriately equipped authorised service stations. The engine range consisted of 1.8 L, 2.0 L and 2.4 L four cylinder units as well as 2.0 L, 2.3 L diesel, and 2.3 L turbodiesel to 2.6 L, 3.0 L, and 3.0
L24v six cylinder units. The 1.8 L and 2.0 L four cylinder petrol engines were all based on the Family

II design, whilst the six cylinder units and the 2.

4 L four cylinder were based on the older Opel caminhead engine family. The base LS was clearly intended for the fleet market, with the sedan unavailable to individual customers in some markets. The LS Caravan was also available as a panel van with rear side windows covered, with body coloured foil rather than replaced by solid panels. The until then base 1.8 L engine was dropped. The LS and GLS trim levels were also dropped, while the CD was joined by Club and CD Diamant. It included alloy wheels, metallic paint, tinted windows, stereo with cassette player, various leather trim in the interior, as well as a painted grille and door mirrors. It featured a straight6, 3.0 litre, twelve valve engine, which produced 177 PS 130 kW. Other modifications from the base model included a lowered suspension and limited slip differential, as well as different fascias and a rear spoiler. The uncatalyzed model was discontinued in August 1988. In countries where the Omega 3000 was sold as a Vauxhall, it was called the Carlton GSi 3000. It also used a more advanced engine control unit. It was built so Opel could compete in the DTM. The car had a three litre straight6 producing 230 bhp 172 kW; 233 PS. This version was named the Lotus Omega or Lotus Carlton depending on whether the base car was sold as an Opel Omega or Vauxhall Carlton in their respective European markets. The car was built using a variety of parts from other GM suppliers and manufacturers. The engine was based on Opels standard 3.0 litre 24 valve, which was handed to Lotus to modify. The engine management was also modified and the ignition changed to an AC Delco type same system as the Lotus Esprit uses. The result was a 377 bhp 281 kW; 382 PS high performance engine. The tyres were custom made by Goodyear, and can be recognised by the small Greek letter Omega on the side. The engine range was all new. Its MV6 model was rebadged and sold in the United States as Cadillac Catera between 1997 and 2001.

The Omega Bs platform was also modified to form the basis of the Australian third generation Holden Commodore up to 2006, commencing with the 1997 VT series. There were prototypes of sedan and station wagon version equipped with multimedia systems, and named V8.com. Unlike the V8.com which was a concept car, this model was intended to go into the serial production. A version of this platform was used for the Holden Monaro which was marketed in the United States as the fourth generation Pontiac GTO, and in the United Kingdom as the Vauxhall Monaro. Between 2001 and 2007, Vauxhall sold the Australian made Monaro coupe, which was derived from the Holden Commodore, itself based on the Omega B platform. Between 1999 and 2006, this Chevrolet was the Omega B derived Holden Commodore imported from Australia. Between 2004 and 2006, Pontiac re introduced and sold its GTO as a coupe based on the Australian made Monaro, which was derived from the Holden Commodore. Between 1997 and 2006, Holden instead adapted the Omega B for its third generation as the Commodore and derivatives, which now also included the Monaro coupe. These vehicles were equally available in New Zealand. In 2005, as the WK Statesman, this vehicle was sold in China as the Buick Royaum and in Korea as the Daewoo Statesman. Apart from the Australian reengineered Holden Commodore models that carried on until 2006 for the sedan wagons and utilities until 2007, production of the Omega ended in 2003 with no direct replacement. Remaining stocks of the car were sold into 2004. Unlike prior models since 1978, this new Holden was no longer based on an Omega platform. Retrieved 18 September 2010. Retrieved 11 September 2007.
